

Silver Linings for Seniors Announces it is Now Offering Telehealth Services

Doing What is in the Best Interest of Their Clients

CARY, North Carolina (May 22, 2020) – Silver Linings for Seniors (SLFS) is excited to announce that it is now offering telehealth services and accepting new clients.

“We always want to do what is in the best interest of our client,” said Ann Marie Sochia, founder and CEO of Silver Linings for Seniors. “Silver Linings for Seniors and its therapists pride themselves on servicing its clients in their homes, ie: Assisted Living Facilities, Independent Living Facilities or private residences. However, with the spread of the Coronavirus, the therapists at SLFS are having to hold off going into their senior clients’ homes.

“The Coronavirus is having a very serious effect on the demographic we serve,” said Amanda Moore, the Marketing Relationship Specialist at Silver Linings for Seniors “We would never want to put our clients in any kind of danger. However, that is where telehealth comes in. We can still service our clients through audio and video.”

Telehealth, as defined by the American Telemedicine Association (ATA) is, “Telehealth is the use of telecommunications technologies to deliver health-related services and information that support patient care, administrative activities, and health education.” At Silver Linings for Seniors, and approved by Medicare, Telehealth can be offered by both audio/video or just audio alone. The technology used is HIPAA compliant to ensure the client’s privacy. If telehealth is not an option, clients can be seen at the SLFS office in Cary.
